Hello Kitty wears a mask and greets guests.

Sanrio Puroland Tokyo, an indoor theme park dedicated to Hello Kitty and the Sanrio characters (<https://en.puroland.jp/>), reopened on July 20. It has been closed from February 22 due to COVID-19.

The gate opened at 10 am, and Hello Kitty wearing a mask waved her hand and the staff greeted the guests, saying, "Welcome back!"

In order to prevent the spread of coronavirus, visitors are limited to those who purchase a fixed date reserved ticket in advance. Guests are asked to check their body temperature and to sanitize their hands and fingers at the entrance. In order to avoid crowding, they are also asked to keep a physical distance from each other.

Tokyo Disney Land and Universal Studio Japan have already reopened and undertaken the same measures to prevent infections.

Japan may start to ease the border restrictions

The Japanese government has already started negotiations with Vietnam, Thailand, Australia, and New Zealand in June as the first step to ease the immigration restrictions that were implemented to control the spread of COVID-19. This relaxation of the ban of entry would only apply to travelers on business.

As the second step, the government decided on July 22 to start talks with 10 other countries, namely, Taiwan, China (including Hong Kong, Macao), South Korea, Singapore, Malaysia, Brunei, Myanmar, Cambodia, Laos, and Mongolia. These countries have strong economic relations with Japan and it appears that their infections are under the control.

Traveling to Vietnam for a business purpose resumed on June 25, and already 150 people have departed Narita Airport to Van Don international Airport via a Vietnam Airlines charter.

This vast landscape of rolling hills called "Palette Hills" are located at Horoka, Chitose-city Hokkaido, which just takes 30mins drive from New Chitose airport (RJCC).

In autumn, you can encounter the stunning scenery of hills covered by countless golden sunflowers against the blue sky. It is definitely an "Instagram" view.

MESSAGE FROM JAS STAFF / JAS NEWS

Hello everybody, its Terry from JAPAN AVIATION SERVICE, a Shanghai native who joined this team last summer.

Everyone knew that Shinzo Abe, the prime minister of Japan, headed to Rio to represent the country that would host the 2020 Summer Olympics, dressed as Super Mario, the star of the popular Nintendo video game series. His performance impressed me a lot and it changed my stereotype on Japanese from being conservative to a humorous and interesting.

Though the 2020 OLYMPICS and PARALYMPICS have been extended to 2021 due to COVID-19 and we still have no idea whether the 2020 OLYMPICS and PARALYMPICS will be held as currently scheduled next summer or not but we wish we could enjoy the games and all of us think the country will give you a unforgettable memories in your life. Hope to see you on the 2021 TOKYO OLYMPIC and PARALYMPIC Games. We, Japan Aviation Service, promise that we will provide our best service to you at that time.
