Japanese seasonal sake

What do you think of when September comes? The end of the summer, or the beginning of the fall? Although these things come to mind, you should also know that September brings us the best season for Japanese sake.

You can enjoy sake during all seasons. However, sake called 'Hiyaoroshi' only appears in the market from September through the end of November.

'Hiyaoroshi' is a term referring its brewing procedure. While ordinary sake is heated twice in its brewing process, 'Hiyaoroshi' is only heated once before storage. Normally, the sake heating process is carried out once before storing for aging, and once before bottling to stabilize its taste. What is different about 'Hiyaoroshi' is that there is no heating process before bottling.

The making of 'Hiyaoroshi' is started in the winter. Once it is stored after fermentation, it spends all the summer in a cool warehouse for aging. Because it is not heated before bottling, it allows the taste to be more gentle and mellow, and it turns much richer in flavor by the fall.

It is absolutely worth trying. Its delicately balanced flavors and aromas are very popular. Please remember if you have a chance to fly to Japan during this season, you should try 'Hiyaoroshi'. And if you want to give a customer or friend a unique gift, we recommend 'Hiyaoroshi'.

Have a good refreshment at home

As COVID-19 continues to get worse due to the Delta variant, a lot more of us are staying home again. This is causing many in Japan to find new things to do while at home.

Camping was getting very popular in Japan before the pandemic. But today, it has become too difficult to do.

However, instead starting in 2021, many Japanese people started to enjoy camping as an indoor leisure activity by using their veranda at home.

By putting your outdoor chair, table, lantern, and a small tent on your veranda, you can start veranda camping! It is not difficult and can be fun and cozy for the long autumn evening. Don't forget to bring your 'Hiyaoroshi' or your favorite drink, and have fun on your veranda!

RECOMMENDED SIGHTSEEING SPOT AND NEAREST AIRPORT

Endoji and the Shikemichi Historical District

Endoji and the Shikemichi Historical District are about a 10min walk from Nagoya Station,.

The history of this downtown area began during the Edo period. When Nagoya Castle construction began in 1610, this place started to become popular among people who organized material transportation to Nagoya Castle by using Horikawa River. During the same period, some temples and shrines were transferred here as well.

Shikemichi Street

Endoji-shotengai

You can walk through the main arcade street called 'Endoji-shotengai' and find many interesting shops and restaurants. In contrast, once you get to a side street called 'Shikemichi Street', you can see historical townhouses and storehouses where you can discover the traditional Japanese lifestyle.

If you have time to visit Nagoya, please go to Endoji and Shikemichi Historical District. You can enjoy tasting Nagoya's traditional food in 'Endoji-shotengai' after having a slow and relaxing time walking on 'Shikemichi Street'.
