Japan's Latest Topics

How to enjoy staying at home

Our lives in Japan have dramatically changed since the covid-19 pandemic broke out. Like elsewhere in the world, people have been spending a lot more time at home. They have been trying to cook, watch movies, play games and even camp at home.

Online shopping has become much more common here, needless to say. Another significant movement happening over the internet is the "online drinking party". Groups of people organize a video chat using ZOOM, Skype or other applications, and sit and drink in front of the screen at home. It has become a common way to meet and socialize with your distant friends.

Food delivery as exercise

Many restaurants were initially forced to be closed. But they have become creative in order to survive on take-out and delivery services. Now in Japan the restaurant take-out and delivery services have become very popular because many restaurants that never offered it before now do.

As this new trend has increased, the number of delivery businesses have also expanded to meet the higher demand. It is common for rental bicycles to be used as a delivery tool. It makes it easy for anyone to start a delivery business. Surprisingly, some celebrities have started delivery services in order to get exercise. And some athletes have started to deliver food as part of their training. There are more than one way to stay in shape!!!

RECOMMENDED SIGHT SEEING SPOT and ITS NEAREST AIRPORT

Karato Market (Shimonoseki City, Yamaguchi Prefecture)

Karato Market is one of the most popular fish markets in Japan. It is located on the western edge of Japan's main island, Honshu, Karato market is filled with spirit and energy from the early morning to the early evening.

Every weekend and on national holidays, a festive fish market event called "Ikiikibakangai (lively-bakangai) is held. A series of seafood stalls are lined up where you can buy and eat a variety of seasonal fish, including many different species of blowfish, sushi, etc. at a reasonable price.

Affectionately known as the "Local Kitchen" by the local residents, Karato market is a great place for fish lovers to shop around while having fun talking with the friendly shop staff.

When the weather is nice, it is recommended to eat outside where there is a stunning view of Kanmon Straits that separates Honshu and Kyushu islands.
