Japan's Latest Topics

COVID-19 may change Japan's long standing trend of concentration in big city areas.

From the postwar up to the present, the population and advanced urban functions have become intensely concentrated in Tokyo or some big cities such as Osaka, Fukuoka and Nagoya. However, the residents of these big cities are now thinking more about leaving to avoid the dense environments. As the infection of COVID-19 spreads, Japanese companies, especially ones based in Tokyo, are trying to make genuine efforts to introduce remote work. The government is also strongly recommending it. These movements are giving many Japanese people an option to live in the suburbs or countryside and work from home.

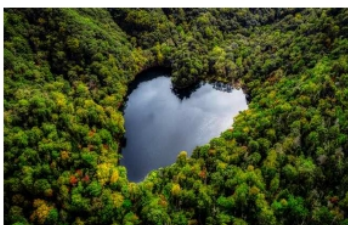

The beautiful season of autumn leaves in Japan is coming up.

Similar to the cherry blossoms in spring, viewing autumn leaves, called 'momiji-gari', is one of the popular activities in autumn in Japan. Starting in the north of Japan and heading to the south, the popular spots for "momiji-gari" are the mountains and river sides, and as well as around temples or other old Japanese-style architecture throughout Japan. People also enjoy combining it with other activities. Viewing autumn leaves while bathing in a hot spring (onsen) is one of them. There are many web-sites which show the best times to visit each popular place.

RECOMMENDED SIGHT SEEING SPOT and ITS NEAREST AIRPORT

Heart Lake 'Toyoni-ko' (豊似湖)

Lake Toyoni is a freshwater lake which lies at an elevated altitude in the town of Erimo, located in the southeastern part of Hokkaido in Japan. Lake Toyoni is also called "Heart Lake" because of its heart-shape when viewed from the sky. Since the lake is thickly surrounded by virgin forests, the heart shape is even emphasized more by the amazingly colorful leaves in autumn. Lake Toyoni has become known because it was chosen for a film shooting spot for a TV ad featuring "Shiroi Koibito (白い恋人), a popular souvenir cookie from Hokkaido. The best way to see the heart shape is taking a helicopter tour which is available from late September to late October. Even though the heart-shape cannot be seen by hiking, you can still enjoy walking in through its secluded atmosphere. It is not yet well-known as a tourist spot. Visitors need to wear hiking equipment. In addition, this area is a home to brown bears, so it is recommended to bring bear protection gear. It is closed in winter season.
